1. The airfield is located about 1 1/2 km north-northeast of Flock (Q 53/K 12), east of the railroad line and road leading to Sierpc (Q 53/K 15). The roads and railroad line intersect about 500 meters south of the field. The field was used by the German Air Force during the war.
2. The southern side of the field was about 1,000 meters long. Bushes and trees were south of the field. The western border of the field was about 500 meters east of the Flock-Sierpc road.
3. No aircraft or flying activity was seen at the field until late April 1950, but on 1 May about 10 planes were parked on the southern edge, and a three-engine plane with cabin windows was seen in the air. [REDACTED] local flights for the civilian population were made on that day.
4. Neither aircraft nor flying activity was observed at the field in mid-May or in June 1950. [REDACTED] only a few planes made intermediate landings at the field. *
